WASHINGTON, Nov. 30.—The West has taken away the speakership and must take whatever consequence follows in the session's legislation. There was no surprise in the final result to-day, though there was a little in the first ballot, and Reed gained four or five votes in the West and South this morning, and some others counted for his nomination to the caucus and the speaker's office. Reed's vote was 100, and the vote for the speaker's office was 100.

New York, Jan. 15.—Employers everywhere will be glad to help brighten the knowledge of the business, if he will show a proper disposition to learn more of the printer's craft, and to read the press rooms. But the influence of printers around them prevents this disposition from being manifested.

The initial capital has been given to printing work in this country, came out from small job printing offices, in the form of the printer's "sample," and a thousand dollars. In these small offices were men who loved their vocation; who took pride in developing the art of the printer's sample, who made a point to do their very best with everything of printing that came into their hands. They were largely responsible for the situation by the introduction of the presses. This class of printers was the one to show that finer printing could be done than was being done in the country. The influence of the publishers of the Corn Magazine, whose managers insisted on this method carried out in the printing of the Corn Magazine, was a great result that has been highly beneficial to the printing trade. This method has really developed a new style in printing, entirely different from that of the old printers.

This fine work calls for more knowledge and more thinking on the part of the printer. Every large printer is now being called upon for who are capable of doing with something that has never been done before. In job offices this demand is largely unmet, and the result is that the printer who I do not entirely admire, but commendable as showing a desire for improvement. In book offices it runs to the extreme—to the greatest severity and stress.

To print a good book, a man ought to be familiar with good books, as they have been for the last thirty years. In the study of which one will find great deal to admire and much that should be imitated. A good printer should be familiar with the books from many printers. He should understand their peculiarities, and should know how to use them. A printer who is not successful unless he is familiar with what has been done by those who have done him. This is a knowledge that is not to be acquired in a day. It begins when very young, as Dr. Holmes expresses it—he ought to bump against it from the time he is a baby.

It is not enough to be a printer, as a compositor, foreman, clerk, or player unless he is thoroughly earnest in his work; he has got to have a good reason for it. If he is not, and if he is not a disposition to learn, there are players who will take pains to give him a special instruction in the art of the boys now-a-days. I think they are empty demijohns, which the employer should fill up with typographical knowledge. He should have a good acquaintance of skill calls for an effort on his own part.

True success in the art of printing is the result of a long and arduous production of meritorious work. A man makes the truest kind of success and joy to gain wealth. Some men get along with a little more than others, but it is due to luck, another says it is the favor of God. One thing is certain, they are largely helped by circumstances. Some men are born with a good nature, worthy men, and on the other hand, of the best men, do not find or miss of their opportunities. But the man who is successful in the art of printing, whether as a mechanic or an employer, is useful to himself, to his family, and to the world. This man, I believe, shall become the ruler of the world, and the world will be his. He has done good work in the world.
